East Asia and International Law (vol.I~VII) Series

Book Description

Publication date: January 1, 2015
ISBN : 978-89-962457-8-0 (set)

East Asia and International Law is a cloth-bound compilation of volumes of the highly prestigious Journal of East Asia & International Law (SSCI/SCOPUS), one of the pre-eminent academic international law reviews published by the YIJUN Institute of International Law. The set of books (vols.1-5) consist of approximately one hundred legal articles and other valuable publications regarding regional affairs in East Asia. Articles are written by East Asian legal scholars who analyze on-going regional affairs, bilateral disputes, and mainstream international legal questions. These five volumes cover various legal topics of contemporary East Asia such as China-US conflicts, international trade and investment, ASEAN integration, South China Sea disputes, the North Korean Nuclear question, human rights, outer space development, climate change, among numerous other important issues. This set of volumes represents some of the finest research for those who wish to gain an understanding of international legal perspectives unique to East Asia. The highly-detailed annotations provide valuable research references for students, scholars or practitioners studying international law at a professional level.
